LAW, SOCIETY, AND HUMAN VALUES

Interdisciplinary Perspectives on Justice, Governance, and Social Transformation

ABOUT THE BOOK

In an era of rapid social change, constitutional transformation, and evolving human values, the relationship between law and society requires deeper interdisciplinary engagement. Law today functions not merely as a system of rules but as a reflection of social structures, moral philosophy, identity politics, and governance frameworks.

This edited book seeks to explore the intersection of Law, Social Sciences, and Humanities through critical, theoretical, empirical, and comparative perspectives.

The book aims to foster dialogue among scholars from diverse disciplines to reimagine justice in contemporary societies.

About the publisher

Law Colloquy is a registered organisation and emerging legal publishing platform dedicated to advancing scholarly research, interdisciplinary dialogue, and public legal awareness. The organisation is committed to academic integrity, neutrality, and intellectual rigour in publishing.
