Citation and Referencing Style (Harvard (In text) style reference)

Law Colloquy has formulated a set pattern of citation and reference. Author(s)/Contributors are required to follow this pattern. Failure of this will amount to rejection of the manuscript.

We follow Harvard (In text) reference style.

Law Colloquy has formulated a set pattern of citation and reference. Author(s)/Contributors are required to follow this pattern. Failure of this will amount to rejection of the manuscript.

Harvard (In text) style

- Harvard in-text style and reference should be used in the manuscript.
- In-text style is parenthetical system which is always at the same page in brackets.
- Footnotes should be only used only in case citation and if you want to elaborate any definition/references.
- When you are using a direct quote or a paraphrase of another source in the body of the work, you should always use an in-text citation.
- An in-text citation in the Harvard style usually consists of the author's last name and the year of publication.
- The in-text citation is usually placed at the end of the quoted or paraphrased paragraph.

Example:

- Author's surname and the year of the publication for example (Kennedy, 2015)
- Two author's references are separated by the commas in the in-text citations. (Kennedy, Clinton, 2015).
- Three or more than three authors references should be separated by comma (Kernis, Cornell, Berry, Harlow, 2018)

Referencing

References should be listed alphabetically at the end of the paper, giving the list of all the sources. Titles and subtitles of articles, books, and journals should have main words capitalized. Titles of books and journals will be printed in italics and should therefore be underlined.

Example:

Some examples of Harvard references for different kinds of publications and sources are mentioned below:
